ENGLISH ABSTRACT

Bertagni Geography is a journey into the world of Geography, which is viewed as a riverbed that is both shaped and filled by the waters of many other disciplines.

A group of individuals of different academic origins has committed itself to intercepting the various sources of knowledge that are complementary to geography, so that the water of the diverse effluents can flow into the main riverbed of a fully comprehensive and harmonized knowledge.

The design of our work has been inspired by the mantra of respect for everything that is Other, for Mother Earth and for the Genius Loci. The sacredness of the Protective Spirit of a Place is the real soul of geography and the thin red line that acts as the binding force of our analysis.

The subject of Geography has been steadily integrated by other disciplines or branches of science; each binomial is then refined through interviews with international professionals with expertise in a specific area and through specialized in-depth articles.

With this new cross-cultural character and role, Geography has been placed in functional relation to the knowledge and the representation of the world; to the study of the dynamics of man and populations; to the analysis of the environment and territory; and to the understanding of economic activities.

This project is, above all, a tribute to Geography which we have investigated through multi-facetted lenses with the intent of offering a modern, flexible and effective perception; we would never intend for Geography to be regarded as a closed and self-referential system or as a strictly notional, mnemonic and austere knowledge.

The objective of Bertagni Geography is to stimulate reflection, which includes methodological considerations, on the complex and inextricable relations between Geography and other areas of knowledge. The aim is to identify points of connection linking the development of geographical thought to the labour market, and hence to move from knowledge to know-how and jump from the academic to the real world!

Everything is connected! The phenomena that can be observed on earth, including natural and anthropic phenomena, need to be addressed with multi-perspective instruments. Rather than claiming, in a sterile manner, the autonomy of Geography, our beloved and often marginalized science could be preserved by highlighting its role as a foundations-subject to be enriched with the aid of other areas of knowledge.

Bertagni Geography distills polihedric, interconnected didactics on the verge of blossoming.

Paraphrasing Ungaretti, in the waters of this multi-cultural river, more than anywhere else, we feel part of the Universe

Get on board.....a surprising journey!
